

The Semicolon

A semicolon (;) is a punctuation mark used between two independent clauses. Semicolons connect independent clauses only when the clauses are closely related in meaning and are not joined by a coordinating conjunction (for, and, nor, but, or, yet, so). There should not be a dependent clause on either side of the semicolon. Remember, a dependent clause is a group of words that has a subject and predicate but cannot stand on its own (For example: While Lisa was reading). On the other hand, an independent clause is a group of words with a subject and predicate that can stand on its own (For example: Lisa is reading.).

Rule 1: Use a semicolon between two independent clauses that are closely related in meaning.

- Wrong: Going to the circus is fun; I went to the beach. (clauses are not related in meaning)
- Correct: The weather was warm and sunny; I went to the beach. (use two independent clauses that relate to one another)

Rule 2: Do not use a semicolon to link a dependent clause to an independent clause.

- Wrong: When I went to the library; I checked out books for my research project. (dependent clause on left side of semicolon)
- Correct: When I went to the library, I checked out books for my research project. (fix by replacing semicolon with comma)

Rule 3: Use a semicolon before conjunctive adverbs (however, otherwise, therefore, similarly, hence, on the other hand, then, consequently, also, thus -- remember the acronym HOTSHOT CAT) when they connect two independent clauses.

- Wrong: Lisa will bring the napkins, paper plates, and silverware to the picnic however, Chris will not bring anything. (there is no punctuation before the conjunctive adverb)
- Correct): Lisa will bring the napkins, paper plates, and silverware to the picnic; however, Chris will not bring anything. (semicolon before the conjunctive adverb)

Rule 4: Generally, do not use a semicolon before a coordinating conjunction that connects two independent clauses.

- Wrong: I like to eat seafood; but my husband prefers Italian. (should not be a semicolon before the word “but”)
- Correct: I like to eat seafood, but my husband prefers Italian. (fix by replacing semicolon with comma)

Rule 5: When listing a series of items in which one or more contain commas, use semicolons to break them apart.

- Wrong: I visited three cities: New York, New York, Dallas, Texas, and Chicago, Illinois. (there are commas within the series of items which may cause confusion)
- Correct: I visited three cities: New York, New York; Dallas, Texas; and Chicago, Illinois. (fix by using a semicolon to break apart the items in the series)
